

THE RUMFORD CITIZEN.

VOLUME I.—NUMBER 19.

RUMFORD FALLS, MAINE, NOVEMBER 22, 1906.

PRICE THREE CENTS.

AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Concert and Lecture Sunday Evening, November Eighteenth.

Sunday evening, despite the fact that the walking was bad and the evening very dark, a good sized congregation was present to listen to the following concert program and a lecture by the pastor, at the Baptist church.

The children taking part were all very young, and considering that fact, they performed their parts very creditably. Not one of them forgot the lines they were to repeat, either in song or recitation. John Chapman, superintendent of the Sunday school, was master of ceremonies.

Hymn by the school, Children of the King. Scripture sentences, Lord's Prayer, by the school. Responsive reading led by Deacon Allen.

Solo by the pastor. Prayer by the pastor.

Junior class, Which loved best. Recitation by Clarence Wade, A thankful heart.

Recitation by Horace Foster. Duet by Gladys Brown and Florence Nelson.

Singing by the school, We would send the midnight.

Recitation by Cloyd Small, Appropriation.

Recitation by Dorothy Longley. Singing by the Juniors, If I were a beautiful twinkling star.

Recitation by Gladys Spindel. Recitation by Hazel Howard, Grandmother's counsel.

Singing by the school, An open Bible for the world.

Solo by the pastor.

The pastor, Theodore L. Frost, announced that he would begin next Sunday night a series of four lectures upon "Jonah." The first lecture would be entitled, "Jonah Aboard;" second, "Jonah Overboard;" third, "Jonah in the City;" fourth, "Jonah's Board." The subject for the Sunday morning's sermon was announced as "Thy Kingdom Come."

He then delivered a short lecture the subject of which was, "Inter-spaces." He said in part: "In our physical, mental and moral life are inter-spaces—spaces not reached by the faithful minister of Jesus Christ.

Ministers and others preaching the Gospel of Christ may be working from different points, and working toward each other; but there is a space between them not reached by the religion of Jesus Christ. In these inter-spaces are hundreds of human beings, whose hearts throb as ours, and whose yearnings are as keen as ours. Are they to be left without a knowledge of God? Not Thanks to the Baptist Publication Society that is spreading the printed word of God, and carrying a knowledge of eternity to the inter-spaces.

We are apt to think of eternity as but a step away, but there is an inter-space between our lives and eternity. A knowledge of God must bridge over the space. Every human being has the capacity for a knowledge of God in his heart. Every normal mind experiences this craving for a knowledge of God. This rational intuition enables us to span the inter-spaces. Can the finite mind reach out and comprehend eternity? No! There is an inter-space that must be spanned by intuition. How faint our faith and knowledge of God without this intuition! This knowledge is revealed in the Bible—His word, and by intuitive reason we comprehend eternity as based upon God's holy word.

In all our lives are good and bad spaces. Our lives are like a checker board. This thought came to me very forcibly, recently. On the checker board are white and black spots, and they are like the white and black spots in human lives.

One week a man may be filled with evil thoughts and deeds, and another with good thoughts and the spirit of Christ. Life is composed of inter-spaces—good and bad. The moral value of our inter-spaces is nothing if we have left Jesus Christ out. Let us live in the light of the throne of religion, and make our lives Christ-like. As we study God's word, as we let Jesus Christ come into our lives, so will He see that our lives are not checkerboards, but are a power for good. If we study and value the life of Jesus Christ and the Bible, it will reveal to us the way to bridge the inter-spaces."

FIRST OF THE DIXFIELD LECTURES.

The first of the series of lectures at Dixfield was delivered, as announced in the Citizen, Thursday evening, Nov. 15th, in the Universalist church. There was a good sized audience to greet the speaker, and he was given very close attention throughout the discourse.

The speaker's voice was well modulated and pleasing, and the discourse was replete with descriptions of Ireland, England, France, Switzerland and Italy, as he saw those countries on a bicycle trip in the summer of 1888. He made the trip upon one of the old style high wheels, and was accompanied by a friend who rode a "Safety."

The speaker, whose sense of humor was very good, pictured his companion upon the low wheel, being obliged to gaze at the hedges that lined the highways in those countries, while he (the speaker) could look over them and see the beautiful gardens that are the pride of the people of Europe.

Many anecdotes of a humorous and now and then of a pathetic character were interestingly told. The queer characters that he met and aptly described furnished much amusement for his auditors. He talked with a washer woman in England, and when he told her that women were paid 15 cents per hour in America for such work, she said, "America must be the land of the best."

The lecture throughout was both instructive and interesting. Mrs. Wynne-fred Staples Smith sang three solos during the evening, and was several times encored. The lecture Thursday night, Nov. 22, will be by Prof. L. C. Bateman, the subject, "Wild West." Prof. Bateman is a profound thinker and an interesting speaker.

E. K. DAY AND G. A. PEABODY CO. ALSO BOWERS AND VALLEE CELEBRATE.

The Anniversary Sale last week of the E. K. Day and G. A. Peabody Co. was an event that not only the proprietors and clerks will long remember, but also the hundreds of persons who visited the store and offered congratulations to the enterprising proprietors and at the same time took advantage of the great bargains that had been advertised in the Citizen.

There were hundreds of strangers in town that day.

It was an anniversary day also for the popular pharmacy conducted by Bowers and Vallee, and they too had a throng. They celebrated the event, as previously advertised in the Citizen, by giving away beautiful Lamson prints—pictures of beauty and value.

An appreciative public attended upon this store all day and Messrs. Bowers and Vallee and their clerks, had all they could do to wait upon the customers.

The Red Cross Pharmacy is introducing an innovation at their soda fountain, it being the custom of serving sandwiches with each soda drink. The filling comes from the George C. Shaw Co. of Portland, and has the pure food law guarantee. This custom has been in vogue in Boston and New York and will add to the satisfaction of the patrons to know that it has been recognized here.

A COMMUNICATION.

Rumford Falls, Me., Nov. 16, '06. To the editor of the Citizen:

I noticed in your paper of the 15th, a communication signed "Business," referring to the loss of the morning and evening trains, and the great inconvenience to the travellers, and the business men of this place. Hardly a day passes but one has more or less business with the county seat, and with the present mail arrangements and connections, it takes two days at the least to get a letter to and from Paris, a distance of about 30 miles. What the public and the business men should first do is to petition to the Postoffice department to establish a mail route between this town and Bryant's Pond by the stage leaving here in the early morning, and connecting with the Grand Trunk Railway for all points east and west, also arriving on the night stage. By these arrangements one could save at least a day's time in communicating between this town and Paris. In other words get a reply in a day's time, and between this town and Chicago save at least 36 hours. Business men look into this matter!

INTERESTED PARTY.

CITIZEN SIGHT SEER.

The Sight Seer did not see the "Great Onion Seizure." But tells the Story as He Heard it.

There are some persons who will be glad to know that liquor and beer are not the only things seized at Rumford Falls—there are those who will actually rejoice that onions have been seized, although the discomfort of Joe, will awaken their sympathy.

The night seer did not happen to be around to see the seizure of the onions, but the story is known to many, and there is no doubt of its being true.

A well known special officer bought a paper bag full of onions; and like the good old fashioned fellow he is, did not request the grocer to deliver them, but took the package with him. He stopped at the police station to pick up a little gossip, and laid down the package, becoming so interested in the report that the negro Francis was on his way to the Falls, that he forgot to pick up the package when he left for home, and went home minus his onions. The fact that he departed for home at once upon hearing the report of the probable invasion of the place by St. Clair Francis, is not mentioned with any purpose of insinuation, although it is well known that home is considered the safest place for a man to be.

The next day he took the package and started for home, but matters engaged him, and after carrying the onions about the streets for two hours he returned to the station and again left the package, and forgot all about the matter. The next day he was told there was a box of liquor for him at the express office. He was very indignant, declaring that he had not sent for anything.

He swore vengeance against the parties who had used his name. He bethought himself of the possibility that some one with a similar name might have ordered something; but inquiry developed nothing satisfactory. In the meanwhile he was getting madder and madder, and at last determined to pay the charges and seize the contraband stuff. With many expressions of disgust he conveyed the box to the station and viciously ripped off the cover.

Several officers were standing near watching operations, and Joe said, "Boys this 'aint no rum." All hands gathered closer and were very much surprised (?) to see Joe draw forth a paper bag containing onions. As Joe saw his own bag of onions, he looked perplexed, even "flabber gasted." He looked from one grinning officer to another, and without saying ah yes, or no, "seized" the onions a second time, and for the third time started for home with them.

This was a great day for "seizures." Joe was seized with paralysis of the tongue, his mind was seized with anger, his feet with a quick homeward step, and he is said to have seized several opportunities of staying at home when he would rather have been down street, notwithstanding the report regarding St. Clair Francis.

The best treatment for indigestion and troubles of the stomach is to rest the stomach. It can be rested by starvation or by the use of a good digestant which will digest the food eaten, thus taking the work of the stomach. At the proper temperature, a single teaspoonful of Kodol will wholly digest 3,000 grains of food. It relieves the present annoyance, puts the stomach in shape to satisfactorily perform its functions. Good for indigestion, sour stomach, flatulence, palpitation of the heart and dyspepsia. Kodol is made in strict conformity with the National Pure Food and Drug Law. Sold by Bowers & Vallee.

LOOKING FOR PEARY'S SHIP.

Steamer Is Proceeding Very Slowly.

Sydney, N. S., November 20.—Commander Peary's Arctic steamer Roosevelt, now en route to this port from Boston Bay, Labrador, has not yet been sighted. A constant lookout for her is maintained at the government light-house at Meat Cove, 60 miles from this place, which the Roosevelt must pass before reaching Sydney. A sharp lookout also was kept on board the Newfoundland mail steamer Bruce, which arrived Tuesday, from Port au Prince, but nothing was seen of the returning Arctic expedition. As the weather was clear during the Bruce's voyage, it is believed she would have sighted the Roosevelt had the steamer been anywhere within 100 miles of Sydney.

Mrs. Peary, the explorer's wife, and W. S. Quigley, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club of New York, who are here, believe that the delay is due to the disabled condition of the Roosevelt and the consequent reduction in speed capacity. Heavy weather and seas prevailed for several days after Peary left Chateau Bay and it is supposed that he did not care to risk pushing the Roosevelt against the big waves in the gulf of St. Lawrence in her disabled condition.

Stories tending to show that the crew of the Roosevelt mutinied in the Far North on account of poor food and Arctic privations, are not credited here. Every member of the crew is an old Arctic sailor and all are said to be well paid.

Useful in a Way.

"Why do you permit gambling houses to flourish at any time?"
"Why," answered the calculating politician, "so that we can have places to shut up when there is occasion for a reform demonstration."—Washington Star.

OF INTEREST TO THE LABOR MEN.

Plans for Child Labor Bill and Referendum Discussed.

Augusta, Me., November 20.—A meeting of the executive board and the legislative committee of the Maine Federation of Labor was held here at Hotel Winthrop, Tuesday.

The following were in attendance: Eugene D. Brann of Ellsworth, president; E. J. Graham of Millinocket, first vice-president; Daniel McDonald of Madison, second vice-president; John C. Clarke of Portland, third vice-president; John Barnes of Lewiston, fourth vice-president; Alden M. Flagg of Auburn, fifth vice-president; Arthur L. Brown of Augusta, secretary and treasurer; John E. Connelly of Bangor, recording and corresponding secretary; Roscoe A. Eddy of Bar Harbor and Abner B. Nichols of Augusta, legislative committee.

The legislative committee was instructed to draw up a bill that could prevent the working of children under 14 years of age in mills and factories. The committee was instructed to further the work of the referendum bill, which was endorsed by the last convention and it was voted that the state federation do not endorse the candidacy of Thomas J. Lyons of Vinalhaven as commissioner of labor and industrial statistics.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church met Thursday afternoon in the vestry, where refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by Mrs. Rolfe and Mrs. Kendall, who are the presidents of the society for the month of November. The new plan of having a board of presidents which is being tried by the society, has proved very satisfactory so far. The presidents for the month of December are Mrs. E. K. Day and Mrs. Williamson. Instead of having a supper, these ladies are planning to give a reception to the members and friends of the society early in the month.

When a horse is so overworked it lies down and in other ways declares its inability to go further, you would consider it criminal to use force. Many a man of humane impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. Dr. John Hastings and wife of Duxbury, Mass., visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Hastings in Bethel last Sunday.

Mrs. Albert Baker of Newry returned from the Eye and Ear Infirmary last Thursday, where she has been several weeks for treatment. Mrs. Baker was always best. Think it over, when you go to buy that box of salts to keep around the house, get De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is the best and particularly interesting speaker, original and the name is stamped on every box. Good for eczema, tetter, chert next Friday evening on mass. All are cordially invited to attend. Service at 7:30 sharp.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Pleasant Evening Recollections—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

BELLS OF LONG AGO.

Thinking bells of the long ago, whose
has your music gone?
Why does your melody grow faint as
the years go creeping on?
Where is the hush of vesper time,
when across the twilight gray
We heard your cry for souls to come—
lost souls to come and pray?

Where are the bells that pealed to God when fair was the world
and young,
Ere the tide of life had ebbed so far
and the sorrows were still unsung?

Where are the olden, golden bells that
guided the straying feet,
And tolled in the evening afterglow
like a benediction sweet?

Thro' the mesh of years there come
the dreams of your echoing,
swelling chime,
And there gleams the sheen on life's great tide of an olden summer-time;

The path winds smooth to the distant world thro' the sweets of a fragrant June,
And the hope in the heart is strong and beats with your melody in tune.

Thinking bells of the long ago, laden
with dust and mould,
Ring again for those who've strayed
from the hearthstone's true en-
fold;

Ring again for the ones whose feet
the stony paths have trod—Bring them back to the fold again—
and show them the way to God!

—Milwaukee Sentinel.

We sometimes treat strangers more politely and courteously than we do our own dear ones who give their lives
for us. "Company manners, tableware and linen," are perhaps not necessary all the time, but what is good for strangers is good for our "loved ones at home."

Sometimes one has more flowers piled on his coffin and grave than he ever had given to him in all his life.
We want our flowers while we are living. The dead are past all that. If we would do good let us do it while we are alive to those who are living.

A crust of bread, a pitcher of water,
a log cabin and perfect love—there is happiness for you, whether the day be rainy or sunny. It is the heart that makes the home, whether the eye rests
on a potato patch or flower garden.
The heart makes home precious, and it is the only thing that can. Home is where the heart is.

The bitterest tears shed over graves
are for words left unsaid and for deeds left undone. "She never knew that I loved her." "He never knew what he was to me." "I always meant to make more of our friendship." "I did not know what he was to me until he was gone." Such words are the poisoned arrows which cruel death shoots from the door of the sepulchre.

The lady who laughs heartily is a doctor without a diploma. Her face does more good in a sick room than a bushel of powders or a gallon of bitter draughts. People are always glad to see her. Their hands instinctively go to meet her grasp, while they turn involuntarily from the damp touch of the dyspeptic, who speaks in the grinning key. She laughs you out of your faults, while you never dream
of being offended with her; and you never know what a pleasant world you live in until she points out the sunny streets on her pathway.

We need to remember that success
in life is not success in material life alone but in the social and religious as well. That a man is not a practical man who is a merchant, a farmer, a teacher merely; he must also be a citizen, a neighbor, a friend, a son, perhaps a brother, a husband, a father—
and most important of all a little child in the garden of a Heavenly King.

The gentle grace of the mother lives in the daughter long after her head is pillowed in the dust of death; and the fatherly kindness finds its echo in the nobility and courtesy of sons, who come to wear his mantle and to fill his places while on the other hand, from an unhappy, misgoverned and disordered home, go forth persons who shall make other homes miserable, and perpetuate the sourness and sadness, the contentions, strifes, and railing which have made their own early lives so wretched and distorted.

Hints for Wives.

Perchance you think that your husband's disposition is much changed;
that he is no longer the sweet-tempered, ardent lover he used to be. This may be a mistake. Consider his struggles with the world's everlastingly race
with the busy competition of trade.

What is it that makes him so eager in the pursuit of gain—so energetic by day, so sleepless by night—but his love
of home, wife and children, and a dread that their respectability, according to the light in which he has conceived it, may be encroached upon by the strife of existence. This is the true secret of that silent care which preys upon the hearts of many men; and true it is,
that when love is least apparent, it is nevertheless the active principle which animates the heart, though fears and disappointments make up a cloud which obscures the warmer element.
As above the clouds there is a glorious sunshine while below are showers and gloom, so with the conduct of man—behind the gloom of anxiety there is a bright fountain of high and noble feeling. Think of this in those moments when clouds seem to lower upon your domestic peace, and by tempering your conduct accordingly, the gloom will soon pass away and warmth and brightness take its place.

Home, Sweet Home.

Stay, stay at home, my heart and rest;
Homekeeping hearts are happiest.
For those that wander they know not where,
Are full of trouble and full of care.

To stay at home is best.
Home—the name made dear by sacred associations, the place where childish feet take their first faltering steps and infant minds receive their first ideas. There lessons of love and truth, of right and wrong, of faith and hope and purity are imprinted upon the plastic heart, and all the sorrows and perplexities of after life are inefficient to quite efface these first deep true impressions. Sweet home, where the mother's gentle hands prepare the little domestic comforts that a father's love provides, and filial affection is
"the silver link, the silken tie" that binds the household band together.
Trials may come and clouds may lower,
but in the seclusion of home remains sweet healing for the wounds that bave and sensitive hearts hide from a disfainful world. There these hurts and distresses may be confidently revealed and a sovereign remedy found in its unquestioning faith. There a child's pure kiss or the touch of dimpled fingers may revive a soul on the verge of despair; and in the home
the brightest dreams become more golden, the rarest pleasure more intense, the tenderest joys more serene.
And if, in the varying decrees of fortune its loving shelter must be abandoned, how the exile folds about his heart, as the traveler does his cloak,
the memory of its lights and flowers,
its loves and hopes and kindnesses.

There the noblest influences exist,
the holiest impulses find expression,
and there have been born the chaste
and lofty sentiments that have made a whole world better.

Children's Fears.

We should deal very gently with the fears of young children. A child is often desperately afraid of little things to which it is not accustomed.
It is not uncommon, for instance, for a child to be terribly afraid of a dog.
A child that shows no fear of horses or strange men was almost thrown into convulsions at the presence of a little dog which ran around the room excitedly. Another child, usually brave, was greatly terrified when placed in a small wagon which it was proposed to use in place of a baby carriage. An unpleasant experience of any kind where it happened or anything which brings back the experience vividly to mind. Parents and others must have patience with such fears, and try to allay them with gentle words or by turning the child's attention to more pleasant subjects. At the very beginning of our experience with children we should remember that they may be frightened at causes which appear very trivial to us, and where fear in any young child is shown, the almost care and the gentlest treatment should be employed to quiet the fears or avoid the cause of them. Otherwise the effect upon the nervous system may be very bad.

BACHELORS.

Bachelors can be found roaming at large in all parts of the world. They inhabit apartments, clubs, open fields, bodies of water and music halls. They are also seen behind the scenes. They hover at times near front gates, and have been found in back parlors with the aid of a searchlight.

Bachelors are nomadic by nature
and variable in their tastes, never going with one girl long enough to be dangerous.

Bachelors make love easily, but rarely keep it. Rich bachelors are hunted openly and shamelessly, and are always in great danger. Those who finally escape are, as a rule, useless ever afterwards. —Tom Mason, in the December Delineator.

STATE NEWS.

Work on the new Union station at Bangor is progressing rapidly and it is expected that it will be ready for occupancy by the time the new summer schedule goes into effect next June. All of the outside work is completed with the exception of the tower.

Bangor is being aroused to the necessity of a gate ordinance to protect the blind alleys which run from the main thoroughfares to the wharves, in such a way as to become death-traps.

A Bath telephone lineman had a narrow escape Monday. In some way he caught hold of an electric light wire, burning his hand and throwing him a distance of 25 feet. After a time he went home unassisted, but complained of internal injuries.

The petition made to the City government for an ordinance to prevent ex-pectoration on the sidewalks is the most popular step ever taken by the W. C. T. U., in Gardiner. Everybody
commends the move, and the city fathers are not likely to disappoint the public when they act on the matter at the next meeting. —Kennebec Journal.

A Portland paper tells of a Cumberland county hunter who was recently attacked by an enormous hedgehog, and who narrowly escaped serious injury by stopping the beast by a couple of well directed shots from his revolver. This leads the Biddeford Journal to remark that there are still some, even after our interesting experience with the porcupine bounty law, who cannot comprehend that there are no hedgehogs in Maine.

Engineer Danforth of Gardiner is pushing the work of survey on the proposed electric road between Gardiner and Topsham. The crew were obliged to suspend their labors last week on account of the storm. Mr. Danforth says that it is the plan of the company to have the rails and sleepers laid so that operations may commence early in the spring.

Manager John L. Donahue, of the Thorndike hotel, Rockland, is now on his way from Messina to Rome, where he will meet Pope Pius X. A well known business man in Messina, who is a personal friend of Mr. Donahue, has promised an audience with his holiness to the Rockland man. Mr. Donahue left last month for an extended European trip in company with Joseph Paladino, who has extensive business interests in both Rockland and Messina. He has planned to be absent three months
and after leaving Italy will visit France, Germany, England, and last,
but not least, the home of his ancestors
in Ireland.

It looks now as if the Maine game laws may have to be tampered with again this winter. For a while deer were very plenty and moose were scarce so special legislation was enacted to allow an increase in the number of moose in the great woods. Now there are complaints coming that there is scarcity of deer and one of the causes given is that the moose have become so plentiful that they are eating much of the feed which used to sustain the deer during the winter months and consequently many deer
are dying. —Bath Independent.

There will be meetings of the Maine

An improvement which will soon be made at the Capitol will be the laying of a new carpet on the stairway leading from the office of the secretary of State to the Executive department, and in the lobby containing the wardrobe for the members of the House. The carpet was selected on the occasion of the last visit of the Governor to the Capitol, and is of blue ground with figures in different shades of brown, making a design of much neatness and beauty. It is expected that the carpet will arrive and be laid in the near future.

When the Legislature convenes in January the law makers will have neat quarters in which to conduct their deliberations as great preparations are being made in both the Senate and the House, where the men are at work cleaning and brightening up the rooms for the winter's work. At present the work is going on in the House, where
the furniture is being cleaned and oiled,
and then rubbed down so that it looks as if it were just out of the shop. The work of clearing the desks is no easy job, as many of them are stained with ink on the top, which has to be scraped off before the new finish can be put on,
and it will be some time yet before the work is completed.

BRIBE GIVERS AND BRIBE TAKERS. STOCK GAMBLERS.

In many things Maine is highly favored, and has much to be truly thankful for, and while on the eve of the season when the governor bids us render thanks for past favors, let us not forget the future. Let us hope for a continuance of these conditions.

There are few states in the Union so free from petty crimes, (outside the crimes against the liquor law,) political corruption, poverty and economic unrest, as the state of Maine.

This flattering condition is attributable in part to our high grade of citizenship; but an absence of conditions that tend to corrupt ordinarily good men is also a large factor. We shall not be immune forever, and signs are manifest that the over flow of these curses from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and other sections, is slowly making its way into Maine. What can we do to protect ourselves and keep our state in an unpolluted condition?

We can not offer at this time, the evidence, even in summary form, of the gigantic wrongs inflicted upon the people and the frauds practiced upon the governments in different states.

The marvelous revelations of dishonest schemes in the stock markets, where men are lured to financial ruin in a manner as shameless as ever was employed by train wreckers, and the bribery in several state legislatures are sufficient for the purpose of this article. Stock gambling can be prevented by making the conducting of such a place as a stock exchange a crime. It is a fact that legislators in Massachusetts sold their votes for money—it is also true that they were able to prevent themselves from being seriously punished. Politics had nothing whatever to do with the matter. The first man caught in the act was a Democrat, and he testified to buying several Republicans, after he had sold himself. These legislators were bought by stock gamblers. None of them were put in jail.

In Montana, when W. A. Clark was "elected" to the United States Senate, men sold themselves in the most open and defiant manner, and every man is known and the price he sold for, and the names and sums against them have been published.

None of the bribers or bribe takers have been put in jail. Prices ranged from $2,500 to $25,000. Clark paid over $250,000 for his "election."

In this state there is no evidence that any legislator ever sold himself; and except in the days of the so-called "State Steal," no offer of a bribe has been made, so far as known.

In anticipation of the growth of the state and the privileges that will be sought from the state by various interests in the future, we should begin enacting laws that will protect the public and the legislators.

Restrictions and limitations should be put upon the privileges that certain franchises may possess—not limitations that are so elastic that there is no limit to the stretching capacity; but iron bound limits, beyond which would be utter disaster for those venturing. Ways of conducting legislature business should be devised that would absolutely remove a legislator from the possibility of being bribed. Some may say such protection cannot be devised. We think otherwise, but this article is already too lengthy and we will defer further remarks until another time, except to say that a penalty of ninety-nine years in state's prison, for offering or accepting a bribe, would somewhat reduce the possibility of such crimes.

WE ALL KNEW SHE HAD MADE A BLUNDER.

Anna Gould, the girl with millions as a dowry who eleven years ago married the "Count" Boni De Castaline of France, has just obtained a divorce, with maintenance denied the "Count."

When the poor girl was deluded into that matrimonial venture, everyone, (except those whose lives are hedged in by a system of espionage that prevents nearly all really useful information from reaching them either in print or conversation,) knew that the outcome would be an unhappy one for the little deformed daughter of Jay Gould.

Thelate James G. Blaine, among other good things, said that measures should be taken to discourage the alliance between American girls and the effete nobility of foreign countries.

The prevailing opinion is that the titles dazzle the girls, and they marry these fortune hunters for the title. Doubtless that has some influence, but more than that, is the influence of the elegant manners and persuasive flattery of the men. Their lives are spent in the social world, and they make a study of the art of pleasing women. The mind of the unsophisticated girl is quickly attracted; and on the surface, (and that is the limit of her perception,) the foreigner appears at a great advantage over the blunt American man, whose manners, although sincere, are far from elegant.

The American men must cultivate easier and more polished manners, and keep the American girls at home.

THE PRESIDENT'S VISIT TO PANAMA.

There are perhaps many things about which President Roosevelt is open to criticism, but it is not his desire to know just what is doing at Panama. The trip he has just made to that place, proves that he has some doubts about the various reports submitted to him.

It is to be hoped that after his inspection he will issue a statement to the American people stating the situation as he has seen it. The interview recently published in the Citizen, with Walter H. Stevens, contained the truth about Panama, and we doubt if the president can be made to see a canal ditch that only exists on paper, any more than Mr. Stevens, who has been on the spot for two years.

We have been asked to write an editorial upon the question of whether or not a man can be good, without doing good, or do good without being good. If any of our readers will render a clear meaning to the question, we will try a hand at an editorial. In the meanwhile we hope the "Upan Kumin" society will take up the question.

"Maxim Gorky is going to write a book roasting Americans. His attempt to freeze them was not successful."—Lewiston Journal.

The American public was pretty cold when Gorky came to America, in fact we were frozen. Who chilled us if he did not? There are signs, however, that we froze up rather hastily, and do not need a roasting to become sensible of the fact.

The Governor and council were unable to devise any satisfactory means to abate what they all regard as the Shiloh nuisance. We expected such an outcome, and while the matter is to be again considered in December, we see no possible chance for a lawful abatement, unless some one who has been defrauded or abused is found to enter complaint.

It seems that the artesian well water supplied is at its source pure and palatable, and the cause for folks generally resorting to spring water for household and drinking purposes, is found (or unfound) after it leaves the wells. We ought not to be helpless in this matter. Who will suggest the remedy?

There are some up and coming folks in Ridgelyville as we ascertain from the doings of the "Upan Kumin" debating society organized there recently.

AN ADVERTISER.

He didn't have a dollar, he didn't have a dime, His clothes and shoes were looking as they'd served their time, He didn't try to kill himself to dodge misfortune's whisks, Instead he got some ashes and filled five dozen sacks, Then next he begged a dollar and in a paper of the town He advertised the polish that would put the sun look 'round, He kept on advertising, and just now suffice to say, He's in a sunny climate, at his cottage on the bay.

WAY UP IN THE STATE OF MAINE.

Dr. Porter Writes of Conditions Around His Boyhood Home.

I am way up in Maine, as the poet Holman F. Day says, and Holman comes up here to get material for his best stories. My relatives live a mile from the great Oxford paper mill whence all the postal cards emanate from that we use, and a carload of them goes out daily from the mill. Ten thousand people live in Rumford Falls, a town of two or three families sixteen years ago. But the forty-two thousand horse power in the great falls of the Androscoggin needed only to be harnessed to draw manufacturers here and great pulp mills now turn out train loads of paper weekly. I yesterday took a walk up into the valley where I was born. A railroad runs through my father's farm to Rangely Lakes hauling down spruce and poplar for postal card pulp. The soil is poor and gravelly; yet by using fertilizer they raise 300 bushels of potatoes or 75 bushels of corn on an acre. Quack grass covers the meadow land and the hay brings $15 to $20 a ton. My nephew threshed 91 bushels of oats last week. It took five men a day to do the task and cost five cents a bushel for the threshing.

One is impressed with the fine, solid, durable work done on most of the old dwelling houses hereabouts. But lumber is becoming poor in quality and high in price, and reinforced cement buildings will be erected a generation hence. The roof and floors will be of cement four inches thick and the walls of cement eight inches thick, all reinforced with rods and wires of iron.

This is a stony country and it is wonderful how many fine, durable stone walls and walls one finds everywhere he goes. I strayed last night with a cousin, one of the three county commissioners who do the work that, in our county, our thirty-three members of the county board do. A hundred years ago his farm was settled by a stone mason who hewed from stone, human heads, wash bowls, door racks, gate posts, etc., and who chiseled on great granite boulders the eleven commandments, his name and the date. Over the first place was chiseled January 1, 1812, and he did that the night his wife was over at my grandfather's, the night that my Aunt Lizzie was born. A man offered $75 for the great oval gate post covered with the commandments. It was refused. I dined with a cousin who had reunion for dinner and his daughter and another young lady shouldered their rifles and went with my brother to his bear traps. No bear was caught but suppose a cub had been trapped and the old bear nearby, what an unearthly yell those young ladies would have given when Mrs. Bruin came forward toward them! My brother had that experience once when he caught a cub, and Mrs. Bear came for him mouth open. He fled and missed; she came on and he had just time to reload when she fell two rods away with a hole between her eyes. He has trapped only one bear and five raccoons this fall.

The people are getting less sociable up this way and the apple paring bees, husking bees, and "shindigs" are almost a thing of the past. Up river ten miles the young men of the two towns had a shooting match which ended with a supper Friday night. The losing side paid for the supper. A dance followed the feast. It was a contest to determine which town could produce proof of the most game killed this year. The plan was something like this: Each side was to bring all the trophies of the hunt it could; a partridge head might count 100 points, a woodchuck skin 100 points, a muskrat 100, coon or mink skin 1000, deer's head 5000, bear skin 10,000 points and so on. I met a young man who had been down below and borrowed $50 worth of peltry for his side, as borrowing is permissible. My cousin's robust daughter who teaches the district school, went to the dance. "I pity your pupils to-day," I said, as she came to the breakfast table smiling. "I would not have gone last night if I had to teach to-day," she said. These Maine teachers have always put as much heart and soul into their work. In the old school house where this girl teaches the floor rises from the recitation seats backward. I remember being seated on the floor there, my back to the school, by the teacher fifty years ago. Sixty-five years ago "Camp Meeting" John Allen, the hero of 305 camp meetings and the grandfather of Madam Nordie, preached there. One of my schoolmates, Chas. L. Fox, of Haverhill, Mass., manufactures more slippers than any establishment on earth except one in Austria.

JOINTLY CHARGED WITH VIOLATING THE LIQUOR LAW.

John Mettler and P. P. Poivier were arrested by Sturgis deputies, charged with having liquor for illegal sale. Friday, Nov. 16th, Judge Johnson heard their defense, and imposed a fine of $100 and costs upon each respondent, and an additional jail sentence was imposed, but was suspended in the case of Poivier, who promptly paid his fine, understanding that his jail sentence would be remitted if he did so.

Mettler entered an appeal and furnished bonds for his appearance at Paris at the next term of court.

He Didn't Need Any.

"Jane," said the fair hostess when the salad had been brought on, "won't you please pass the oil to Uncle Reuben?"

"Never mind," replied Uncle Reuben, "I guess I don't need none, I greased my boots just before Martin's from home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. FORBES.

Services Held at All Souls' Church in Her Memory.

All Souls' Church, Fourteenth and L streets northwest, was the scene of an impressive service yesterday afternoon, in memory of Mrs. Maria Holt Forbes, whose death occurred at Falls Church, Va., October 30th.

There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, and many beautiful floral tributes, one of which was a replica of the Forbes family coat of arms, done in red and white roses. These were banded upon the chancel and afterward placed on the graves of Mrs. Forbes and her husband, in Falls Church cemetery.

The services consisted of a sermon by Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, rector, and solos by Miss Rosalie Holberg, who sang Mendelssohn's "Oh, Rest in the Lord," and "Thy Way, Not Mine."

Mrs. Forbes was the daughter of Deacon J. Holt, of Bethel, Me., and was married to Wella Forbes, a prominent New Hampshire business man, about 63 years ago. They went to Falls Church, Va., some years ago. Mr. Forbes died in 1901.

Mrs. Forbes is survived by an only daughter, Mrs. Anna Forbes Grossman, the wife of a well-known Washington business man, who resides at 3425 Brown street northwest.—Washington Post.

We Are Thankful

As Thanksgiving Day draws near we pause in our business hurry and reflect upon the blessings received in the past and are receiving in the present and aside from the deeper sense of gratitude for life and health and plenty from the controlling Hand which directs us, we wish to express our sense of gratitude for the support given us as a company by a generous public. We feel you own a share of our capital stock and we are directing our constant efforts towards the dividends your confidence has earned. Such dividends will come to you indirectly through the purchases you make, for your confidence makes it possible to conduct a business on a smaller margin of profit than otherwise could be. We shall try to deserve well of your future patronage.

A Remarkable Collection Of Stylish Furs.

Standard of Qualities High—Prices Low

Our this season's collection of furs, both Muffs and Neck Pieces represent creditably Day's policy of dealing with the public—Splendid variety of Day's qualities at Day's low prices. There is no line of women's wearables that so much is gained by early buying than furs. The first lots are made from first picking of skins and are necessarily the best; later orders are filled from skins first thrown aside. We buy our furs early and get first choosing therefore buying here means furs full of life and perfection.

THE SOCIAL CLUB OF MARRIED COUPLES.

The new social club recently formed,
mentioned two weeks ago, held another bowling party Friday night. All but three of the couples were present. The women showed some increase in skill,
and while none of them made a strike,
they all made "hits." There were some very good scores made, but whether the score was big or little,
they all declared the time was a great one.

sitting up all night.

turned Monday from a successful hunting trip. Mr. Cornell shot a good sized deer near South Rangeley and

ing week.

Fifteen men were in the "roll off" at the alleys Monday night. Some of the crack bowlers made very low scores. Shea won first prize with a good score of 304. Andrews was second and Tucker third. Only the two first exceeded 265 score. After the "roll off," some who had scored lowest, rolled up good scores.

Harry Marx was driving along Hartford street last Friday with his span, when, as he was about to turn round in front of the Strathglass building, one of the horses slipped, which swayed
the pole of the sleigh far enough to hit a post. The pole was snapped short off. It was a most unexpected result for so slight an impact, and surprised the bystanders. The horses behaved well and the presence of mind displayed by Mr. Marx averted a serious accident.

"Clothes for Gentlemen"

You can't ALWAYS tell a gentleman by his clothes but most gentlemen wear good clothes for all that.

It isn't a matter of time and
experiment to select them, either,
any more than it is a matter of
large expense—all you have to do is to go to the right store.

A suit like the one illustrated,
for instance, may be had as low as $12, or as high as $25 here. Between these figures you can surely find the suit and the price that will exactly meet your wishes.

Our clothes, of which this is an example, are gentlemen's clothes
of the best kind.

Let Us Show You The New styles—Just In.

CANTON HAPPENINGS.

As Observed and Told By The Citizen Reporter.

Autopsy of Man well known in Canton.

News has been received of the suicide in Manchester, N. H., of Harry
E. Cornish, who married Miss Nina Russell, a daughter of George Clinton Russell and who spent her girlhood in Canton before removing to Lewiston.

Mr. Cornish was a man thirty-four years of age. His friends attribute his rash deed to insanity. He entered a barber shop in the morning of Nov.
8th by breaking a window; seized a razor and cut his throat. Death followed shortly.

Before going to Manchester, N. H., about a month ago, Mr. Cornish had been employed in the shoe business in Webster, Mass. for over a year. He left his family with his wife's parents in Livermore Falls until he should be located in Manchester, and they were in Livermore Falls when the tragedy occurred.

Mr. Cornish comes of a well known and highly respected family, being a son of the late Daniel Cornish, formerly a resident of Lewiston. Besides his wife and two children, Marjorie and Russell, he leaves to mourn his loss,
a mother and brother, Albert E. Cornish and a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Oliver of Portland. The remains were taken to Portland for burial.

Evergreen Chapter Honored.
The regular meeting of Evergreen
Chapter, No. 24, Order of Eastern Star held Tuesday evening, Nov. 13th, in Masonic Hall, was rather an in-regular meeting, as several unusual features were on the program of the evening.

The Chapter was visited by District
Deputy Grand Matron, Mrs. Florence
B. Rounds of Waterville, Me., who inspected the work of the degree staff
and was well pleased and spoke very highly of the work.

Further honor was conferred upon the Chapter by an invitation to go to Buckfield to exemplify the work at the institution of their chapter on the following Tuesday night, and the invitation was accepted. The attendance at the meeting was excellent and three candidates were initiated.

Ferns, potted plants and cut flowers
in profusion were used in the decoration of the main hall and the banquet hall was decorated in the five colors of the points of the star. Delicious refreshments of escapoped oysters,
pickles, celery, coffee and rolls, fancy cakes and jellies in the colors of the points of the star were served with whipped cream and a variety of fruits were also served.

The evening was a very enjoyable
one indeed, as are all of the functions of the Order of Eastern Star.

Better than Ever.
The ladies of the Unitarian Church
have a reputation for serving most delicious suppers and as it is a progressive organization the supper served in Gilbert Hall last Thursday night was
better than ever.

The menu consisted of baked beans,
brown bread, pickles, celery, hot rolls and coffee, cookies, doughnuts, and a variety of fancy cakes and pies that could not fail to suit the most epicurean taste.

This supper was also very enjoyable socially, and wit and repartee flew from table to table. Quite the most sensational and mirth provoking episode of the evening was the announcement of an engagement by one of the ladies. The laughter and hilarious congratulations occasioned by this abrupt announcement immediately put one wise to the fact that it was a joke.

Great credit is due the committee
who had charge of this pleasant entertainment and made it so successful an event. The ladies of the committee were Mrs. Helen Eastman, Mrs. Etta Gilbert and Mrs. Eric York.

Webb and their son and daughters

ances and true friends during their

parture sincerely and wish them success and happiness in their new home.

14th. She is survived by her husband,

Nov. 16th, and the interment was at the Hartford cemetery.

Anasagunticook Sunday School Association.

The Anasagunticook Sunday School Association held its fourteenth annual session, Friday, Nov. 16th in the Free Baptist church of Canton.

On account of the inclemency of the weather, the attendance at the morning session was rather small, but the afternoon and evening services called out
a good number of people.

The program as it appeared in last week's issue was carried out with but a few changes. The speakers of the day were Rev. P. F. Marston of the Congregational church of Lewiston at the morning service, and his address on the subject, "One hundred years of church evangelism," was most excellent. Mr. Marston is a very eloquent speaker and his address was one of the most interesting and helpful.

A splendid address on "Christian Civic Support of Prohibition," was given by Rev. L. L. Hayward of the High Street Methodist church of Auburn at the afternoon meeting. The address of the evening was given by Rev. A. W.
Anthony, D. D., of Lewiston on the subject, "Teachers and Teaching."

The praise services were very enjoyable, and in the evening the following young ladies assisted in the music:
Arma Webb, Enid Daley, Gladys Waite, Mabel Carver and Ethel Packard, with Carro Proctor as organist.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Rev.
Theodore Lyman Frost of Rumford Falls; vice-presidents, W. H. Berry of

THE MAN ON THE BOX

By HAROLD MAGRATH.

"What did I mean?" vaguely. Her thought had been elsewhere.
"By that supposition."
"Oh, I mean that my position, had I married you, would have been rather anomalous to-day." She extended the other arm. "You are in love."
"In love?" He looked up quickly.
"Decidedly; and I had always doubted your capacity for that sentiment."

"And pray tell me, with whom I am in love?"
"Come, Count, you and I know each other too well to waste time in beating about the bushes. I do not blame you for loving her; only, I say, it must not be."

"Must not be?" The count's voice rose a key.
"Yes, must not be. You must give them up—the idea and the girl. What! You, who contrive her father's dishonor, would aspire to the daughter's hand? It is not equitable. Love her honorably, or not at all. The course you are following is base and wholly unworthy of you."

He dropped the arm abruptly and strode across the room, stopping by a window. He did not wish to see her face at that particular instant. Some men would have demanded indignantly to know how she had learned these things; not so the count.
"There is time to retrieve. Go to the colonel frankly, pay his debts out of your own pockets, then tell the girl that you love her. Before you tell her, her father will have acquainted her with his sin and your generosity. She will marry you out of gratitude."

Karloff spun on his heels. His expression was wholly new. His eyes were burning; he stretched and crumpled his gloves.
"Yes, you are right, you are right! I have been trying to convince myself that I was a machine where the father was concerned and wholly a man in regard to the girl. You have put it before me in a bold manner. Good God, yes! I find that I am wholly a man. How awfully all this would have gone to the end had she not crossed my path! I am base, I, who have always considered myself an honorable man. And now it is too late, too late!"

"Too late? What do you mean? Have you dared to ask her to be your wife?" Had Karloff held her arm at this moment, he would have comprehended many things.
"No, no. My word has gone forth to my government; there is a wall behind me, and I can not go back. To stop means worse than death. My property will be confiscated and my name obliterated, my body not allowed in the frozen north. Oh, I know my country; one does not gain her gratitude by failure. I must have those plans, and nowhere could I obtain such perfect ones."

"Then you will give her up?" There was a broken note.
The count smiled. To her it was a smile scarce less than a snarl.
"Give her up? Yes, as a mother gives up her child, as a lioness her cub. She has refused me, but nevertheless she shall be my wife. Oh, I am well-versed in human nature. She loves her father and I know what sacrifices she would make to save his honor. To-night!" But his lips suddenly closed.

"Well, to-night? Why do you not go on?" Mrs. Chadwick was pale. Her gloved hands were clenched. A spasm of some sort seemed to hold her in its shaking grasp.
"Nothing, nothing! In heaven's name, why have you stirred me so?" he cried.

"Supposing, after all, I loved you?"
He retreated. "Madam, your suppositions are becoming intolerable and impossible."

"Nothing is impossible. Supposing I loved you as violently and passionately as you love this girl?"
"Madam,"—he smiled with gentleness, "do not say anything which may cause me to blush for you; say nothing you may regret to-morrow."

"I am a woman of circumspection. My suppositions are merely argumentative. Do you realize, Count, that I could force you to marry me?"
Karloff's astonishment could not be equalled. "Force me to marry you?" "Is the thought so distasteful, then?" "You are mad to-night."

"Not so. In whatever manner you have succeeded in this country, your debt of gratitude is owing to me. I do not recall this fact as a reproach; I make the statement to bear me on in what I have to submit to your discerning intelligence. I doubt if there is another woman, here or abroad, who knows you so well as I. Your personal honor is beyond impeachment but Russia is making vast efforts to speckle it. She will succeed. Yes, I could force you to marry me. With a word I could tumble your house of cards. I am a worldly woman and not without wit and address. I possess every one of your letters, most of all have I treasured the extravagant ones. To some you have signed your name. If you have kept mine, you will observe that my given name might mean any one of a thousand women who are named 'Grace.' Shall you marry me? Shall I tumble your house of cards? I could go to Col. Annesley and say to him that if he delivers these plans to you, I shall denounce him to the secret service officers. I might cause his utter financial ruin, but his name would descend to his daughter untarnished. "You would not dare!" the count interrupted.

"What? And you know me so well? I have not given you my word to reveal nothing. You confided in me because you had proved me. Man is not infallible, even when he is named Karloff." She lifted from a vase her flowers, from which she shook the water. "Laws have been passed or annulled; laws have died at the executive desk. Who told you that this was to be, or that, long before it came to pass? In all the successful intrigues of Russia in this country, whom have

"IT IS WAR, THEN?"
you to thank? Me. Ordinarily a woman does not do these things as a passion. There must be some strong motive behind. You asked me why I have stirred you so. Perhaps it is because I am neither two-and-twenty nor you are two-score. It is these little barriers that remain in a woman's heart. Well, I do not love you well enough to marry you, but I love you too well to permit you to marry Miss Annesley."

"That has the sound of war. I did love you that night,"—not without a certain nobility.

"How easily you say 'that night!' Surely there was wisdom in that smile of mine. And I nearly tumbled into the pit! I must have looked exceedingly well . . . that night!"—drily.

"You are very bitter to-night. Had you taken me at my word, I never should have looked at Miss Annesley. And had I ceased to love you, not even you would have known it."

"Is it possible?"—ironically.
"It is. I have too much pride to permit a woman to see that I have made a mistake."

"Then you consider in the present instance that you have not made a mistake? You are frank."
"At least I have not made a mistake which I can not rectify. Madam, let us not be enemies. As you say, I owe you too much. What is it you desire?"—with forced amiability.

"Deprive Col. Annesley of his honor, that, as you say, is inevitable; but I love that girl as I would a child of my own, and I will not see her caught in a net of this sort, or wedded to a man whose government robs him of his manhood and individuality."

"Do not forget that I hold my country first and foremost,"—proudly.

"Love has no country, nor laws, nor galling chains of incertitude. Love is magnificent only in that it gives all without question. You love this girl with reservations. You shall not have her. You shall not have even me, who loves you after a fashion, for I could never look upon you as a husband; in my eyes you would always be an accomplice."

"It is war, then?"—curtly.
"War? Oh, no; we merely sever our diplomatic relations," she purred.

"Madam, listen to me. I shall make one more attempt to win this girl honorably. For you are right; love to be love must be magnificent. If she accepts me, for her sake I will become an outcast, a man without a country. If she refuses me, I shall go on to the end. Speak to the colonel, madam; it is too late. Like myself, he has gone too far. Why did you open the way for me as you did? I should have been satisfied with a discontented clerk. You threw this girl across my path, indirectly, it is true; but nevertheless the fault is yours."

"I recognize it. At that time I did not realize how much you were to me."

"You are a strange woman. I do not understand you."

"Incomprehensible. Come, the carriage is waiting. Let us be gone."

"You have spoiled the evening for me," said the count, as he threw her cloak across her shoulders.

"On the contrary, I have added a peculiar zest. No, let us go and appear before the world, and smile, and laugh, and eat, and gossip. Let the heart throbb with a dull pain, if it will; the mask is ours to do with as we may."

"They were, in my opinion, two very unusual persons."

CHAPTER XVII.
DINNER IS SERVED.

"Hail!"
Monsieur Pierre, having uttered this ejaculation, stepped back and rested his fat hands on his fat hips. As he surveyed the impromptu ballet, a shade of perplexity spread over his oily face. He smoothed his imperial and frowned. This group certainly looked right, but there was something lacking in his make-up, that indefinable something which is always found in the true servant—servility. There was no humility here, no hypocritical meekness, no suavity; there was nothing smug or self-satisfied. In truth, there was something grimly earnest, which was not to be understood readily. Monsieur Pierre, having always busied himself with soups and curries and roasts and sauces, was not a profound analyst; yet his instinctive shrewdness at once told him that this fellow was no servant, nor could he ever be made into one. Though voluble enough in his kitchen, Monsieur Pierre lacked expression when confronted by any problem outside of it. Here was the regulation swallow-tail coat and trousers of green, the striped red vest and the polished brass buttons; but the man inside was too much for him.

"Diable! You like right. But no, I can not explain. Set eyes on zee tongue, but eet rayfoss. Hal! I haf eet! You lack voi zay call zee real. You make me tink of zee airvant on zee stage, something bettaff off, eh?" This was as near as monsieur ever got to the truth of things.

During this speculative inventory, Warburton's face was gravely set; indeed, it pictured his exact feelings. He was grave. He even wanted Pierre's approval. He was about to pass through a very trying ordeal; he might not even pass through it. There was no deceiving his colonel's eyes, hang him! Whatever had induced fate to force this old Argus-eyed soldier upon the scene? He glanced into the kitchen mirror. He instantly saw the salient flaw in his dress. It was the cravat. Tie it as he would, it never approached the likeness of the conventional cravat of the waiter. It still remained a polished cravat, a worldly cravat, the cravat seen in ball-rooms, drawing-rooms, in the theater stalls and boxes, anywhere but in the servants' hall. Oh, for the ready-made cravat that hitched to the collar-button! And then there was that servant's low turned-down collar, glossy as celluloid. He felt as different in his bare throat, as a debutante feels in her first décolleté ball-gown, not very well covered up, as it were. And, heaven and earth, how appallingly large his hands had grown, how clumsy his feet. Would the colonel expose him? Would he keep silent? This remained to be found out; wherein lay the terror of suspense.

"Remember," went on Monsieur Pierre, after a pause, feeling that he had a duty to fulfill and a responsibility to shift to other shoulders than his own, "remember, eet you spill zee soup, I keel you. You carry zee tureen in, zen you deesh out zee soup, and saifre. Zee cystalres should be on zee table three minutes before zee guests haf arrive. Now, can you make zee American cocktail?"

"I can,"—with a ghost of a smile.

"Make heem,"—with a pompous wave of the hand toward the favorite ingredients.

"What kind?"

"Vot kind! Eet zee rare more cocktail, zen?"

"Only two that are proper, the Manhattan and the martini."

"Make zee martini; I know heem."

"But cocktails ought not to be mixed before serving."

"I say, make zee one cocktail,"—colder and skeptically. "I test heem," (To be Continued.)

When Black Was White.

When Gen John C. Black was in New York city some time ago he asked the colored man who had performed some service for him what his name was. "My name is White," replied the man. "Aren't you a pretty black man to be called White?" said the general, jokingly. The darky looked up at the general's snowy head, his white beard and his rather white face, and said: "And aren't yo' a pretty white man to be called Black, sir?"

Grave of Dan Rice's Trick Horse.

Dan Rice, the veteran showman, owned a farm at Girard, Erie county, Pa., and there he spent the greater part of the winters. The old one-ring barn he used still stands, with other buildings erected under his supervision. Over the remains of his blind, snow white trick horse Excelsior, Rice built a mausoleum and placed a statue at the foot of the steps. To-day it stands in the yard, but few know it marks the grave of a horse.

A Tale of a Faithful Dog.

Organist Pilkington, at Painsbury, Northamptonshire, England, used to be accompanied every Sunday to the church door by his terrier, which waited patiently until the service was concluded. Six weeks ago the organist died. On each Sunday since then the dog has gone to the church, looked wistfully about, waited until everybody had departed and then gone home mournfully.

Longevity Inheritable.

One word more about longevity. I believe it can be produced or at least perpetuated by breeding, just as other qualities can. Go in a country graveyard and study the tombstones. You will find certain families gifted with remarkable longevity. And where these long-lived families have intermarried you will find that the longevity has been perpetuated.—N. Y. Press.

Manufacture of Tantalum.

The manufacture of tantalum, one of the hardest metals known, into sheets and bars is now, it is said, being practiced in Germany by the squirting process, the material in its original powdered form being mixed with water and gum tragacanth, and then successfully forced into rods and shapes as desired.

DANGERS FROM DYSPEPSIA.

Imperfect Digestion Most Prolific Cause of Serious Disease.

Few people seem to realize the real dangers in disturbed, deficient or defective digestion.

While health reports do not give indication as a cause of death, yet it is in reality often fatal, as it so weakens the stomach that one becomes readily susceptible to an attack of typhoid fever, kidney disease, nervous prostration or other serious or fatal disease.

At the first symptoms of indigestion, M-t-o-n-a stomach tablets should be used. If there is a feeling of heaviness in the stomach, distress after eating, nervousness, dizziness, nausea, headaches, sleeplessness, pains in the side and limbs, speaks before the eyes, or a peevish, irritable condition, with debility and weakness, begin the use of M-t-o-n-a at once.

It will build up the stomach and digestive organs so that you can eat anything at any time without fear of distress or indigestion.

A 50-cent box of M-t-o-n-a tablets will, in most cases, give prompt relief and cure, although in chronic and long-standing weakness of the stomach, two boxes or more are sometimes needed, but the Cote Pharmacy, A. H. Williamson, Prop., Rumford Falls, and Nathan Reynolds of Canton, guarantee M-t-o-n-a will cure, in all cases, no matter how chronic or serious, or money will be refunded. You run no risk whatever in buying M-t-o-n-a.

Frank Norton has resigned his position in E. W. Howe's store and expects to go to New York to spend the winter.

THE LAST ONE.

Sole Surviving Widow of Revolutionary Soldier is Dead.

Esther Sumner Damon, said to be the only surviving widow of a soldier of the revolutionary war, died at her home in Plymouth Union at the age of 93 years. She was married in 1835, when she was 21 years old, to Noah Damon, who was then 76 years of age. Damon served through the revolutionary war, having enlisted in 1775. Upon his death in 1833, his widow was granted a pension of $12 a month and one year ago, this was doubled. The last Vermont Legislature made an appropriation of $200 for her.

It is not impossible that in the year 2000 someone may be living and telling tales of the Revolution as related to them, in childhood, by a widow of a soldier who fought in that war.

FIRST EVER BUILT.

Electric Railroad Locomotive for Atlantic Shore Line Railway in York County.

The first electric railroad locomotive to be built for any electric street railway in this part of the country arrived at Portsmouth, N. H., on Tuesday from the Locomotive Car Works for the freight department of the Atlantic Shore line.

The big machine weighs 40,000 pounds and is of 400 horse-power. It is equipped with the very latest in electrical power machinery and was made by the Locomotive company from a special design for the Atlantic Shore Line company.

The company will have three of these engines, two of which will be fitted out at Kittery Point and one at Kennebunk.

The engines will haul five or six loaded freight cars and are arranged not only to move the cars of the Atlantic Shore line but to haul Boston and Maine freight cars or any other companies.—Portsmouth Chronicle.

CHAPMAN-BOLSTER.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at the residence of N. D. Bolster, South Paris, last Wednesday evening, when the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bolster, Miss Elsie May, was united in marriage with Mr. Donald Payson Chapman. Rev. A. K. Baldwin of the Congregational church officiated, using the single ring service. Only the two families were present. After the ceremony refreshments were served.

The young couple are spending their honeymoon in Bethel, and intend settling there for the winter, where Mr. Chapman will engage in lumbering.

Both young people are graduates of Paris High School. Mrs. Chapman in the class of '03, and Mr. Chapman in the class of '06, and are well known in town, where they have many friends who wish them a long and happy life.

Many presents were received from relatives and friends, including silver, cut glass, china, etc.

Mr. Chapman is the son of George A. Chapman, who came to this town from Bethel a few years since. Mrs. Chapman is the daughter of N. D. Bolster, president of the South Paris Savings Bank, and a leading business man and citizen of the town.—Oxford Democrat.

Mr. Chapman's Bethel friends extend congratulations.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S HOLIDAYS.

"It is understood that the Grand Trunk Railway System will introduce for the approaching holidays a pleasing innovation in the way of excursion fares, and the public will be able prior to and during the Christmas and New Year's holidays, to visit their friends on a liberal basis of reduced fares that are likely to be much appreciated."

Miss Lena Felt went to Bryant's Pond Sunday to attend the funeral of her grandmother, Mrs. Bryant, on Monday.

A wrestling match between Philip Ash of Rumford Falls, and Wilfred Barrett of Lewiston, is one of the events in process of development.

Conquered.

She (after a lovers' quarrel)—I suppose you want your presents back? He—Ah, no; keep them. If any of the fellows ask about the presents, I'll explain that they were fully paid for in hugs and kisses.

She (on second thought)—My dear, suppose we forget we have quarreled and begin over again.—N. Y. Weekly.

In His Line.

"Married, are you?" laughed his friend, "I thought you were a confirmed old bachelor."

"I thought so, too," replied the doctor, "but I struck a patient with a bad case of heart trouble, and the only way I could cure her was by proposing"—Detroit Free Press.

Cheap Doctoring.

Anxious Mamma—Little Dick is upstairs crying with the toothache. Practical Papa—Take him around to the dentist's.

"I haven't any money." "You don't need any money. The toothache will stop before you get there"—N. Y. Weekly.

Fixing the Blame.

Stern Parent—No, sir, I'll never give my consent to your marriage with my daughter until you are able to support her.

Young Man—Oh, very well. If you want her to die an old maid, I have nothing more to say.—Chicago Daily News.

So Inconsistent.

Coddington—I hear your address is changed again. Snooker—Yes—basely nuisance! Coddington—What, changed the number of the house, has he? Snooker—No, applied for the rent.

An Odious Comparison.

"Doesn't Scrubby look cheap beside that magnificent, well-dressed wife of his?"

"I should say so! He looks like a bar-tender's shirt-stud beside the Koh-noor!"—Judge.

A MINERAL SPRING AT SMITH'S CROSSING.

The Water to be Sent to the Town of City Dwellers.

Mr. Herbert Wood has been engaged by out of town parties to construct a reservoir and pumping station at the spring at Smith's Crossing. The water of this spring, it is claimed, is of pure mineral quality, and it is to be bottled and shipped to the large cities of the country.

The fact that there is water of such character in abundance at Rumford Falls, has heretofore escaped the attention of the people here who are themselves suffering for good drinking water.
